

THE MINISTER'S BLACK VEIL

The sexton stood in the porch of Milford meeting-house, pulling busily at the bell-rope. The old people of the village came stooping along the street. Children, with bright faces, tripped merrily beside...

Peek Inside the Book

When the friend shows his inmost heart to his friend; the lover to his best-beloved; when man does not vainly shrink from the eye of his Creator, loathsomely treasuring up the secret of his sin; then deem me a monster, for the symbol beneath which I have lived, and die! I look around me, and, lo! on every visage a black veil! Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Minister's Black Veil

Reader's Opinions

Hawthorne's tales always leave me puzzled and looking for more, and this story was no exception. The life and attitude of the minister was painted so genuinely that you could really connect with the character as he went through this journey.
